

Local Women's Group Grants $122,000 to Maggie's Wigs 4 Kids for "Building the Future" Renovation Project

The women's philanthropy group Impact100 Metro Detroit yesterday awarded a $122,000 grant to Maggie's Wigs 4 Kids. The funds will support renovations to a building recently donated by a retiring physician. The new space will better meet their expanding programming needs and the renovations will ensure it is safe for the health of their often immune-compromised young clients and their families.

Maggie Varney, Founder & CEO of Maggie's Wigs 4 Kids, says this gift "will help us have a forever home so we'll always have a place to provide support and love for families as they heal." In addition to wigs, they offer classes and counseling for families, and a place children can be with other kids like themselves. "There's nothing more heartwarming than giving to a cause when you know the person (Maggie) is giving so much of themselves," says Amy Anger, President of Impact 100 Metro Detroit.
